INTRODUCTORY MEMORANDA.

The haste consequent on all Sale Catalogues unavoidably causes some occasional errors which at the moment pass unheeded, a few are here attempted to be corrected.

No. 87, for Canrusium read Cannusium. No. 94, was a pair of gold earrings.

Considerable interest having been excited by the Bulla, no. 133, it has been asked whence was Lady Fellowes' specimen obtained? Formerly it belonged to Ficoroni, the Antiquary, at Rome, who wrote a volume respecting it; from him it passed into Horace Walpole's Collection, see Sale Catalogue, 1842, Fifteenth day, no. 70. At the Strawberry Hill Sale it was purchased by the writer for the late Mr. Knight, of Canonbury; his widow is now Lady Fellowes.

No. 525, was a portrait of the Duke of Buccleugh, from the Marchioness of Thomond's Collection. No. 553, was the Brouwer painting purchased at Lord Gwyder's sale.

No. 611, is an accredited portrait of Thomas Aquinas; and no. 614, in place of Giotto, is attributed to Tangelico.

Mr. Rogers in reference to the Claude gem, no. 624, used to relate—J. T. Smith told me that the little Landscape by Claude, hanging near the Puck, for which at West's Sale I gave two hundred guineas, was bought by West at an old iron shop for ten shillings and sixpence.

No. 632, was not by HARLOWE, but by JAMES GREEN; it was the last portrait painted of Stothard. No. 700, for BASSANO, read TITIAN; and no. 816, for ARIOSTO, read PETRARCH.

No. 822, Addison's writing table, elicited some observations in some of the leading journals which were erroneous. In reference to the subject the following explanation has been addressed to the publisher.

In some remarks on the Collection formed by the late Mr. Rogers, it has been observed in speaking of Addison's writing table, that Addison's only child who lived to a great age, gave this very table to Sir Thomas Lawrence. This statement is not correct. Sir Thomas Lawrence first visited Rugby, the adjoining parish to Bilton, in the latter part of the year 1797, to attend the funeral of his father, Mr. Thomas Lawrence, who died at the residence of the Rev. R. R.

Bloxam, D.D., who had married the youngest sister of Sir Thomas Lawrence. Miss Addison died at Bilton Hall in the month of March previous, and Sir Thomas Lawrence was neither personally acquainted with her, nor had ever seen her. After Miss Addison's death, the Library, Medals, and Coins, collected by Addison, were removed from Bilton Hall to London and there sold, but the Furniture, much of which had belonged to Addison, was not sold till March, 1825, twenty-eight years after Miss Addison's death. At this sale I bought Addison's writing table. There were then living at Rugby and Bilton several persons who had been acquainted with Miss Addison, and some of these were able to verify the table in question as one Miss Addison used to speak of as a favourite writing table of her father's, and as having been used by him when writing papers for the Spectator, etc. The Rev. J. H. C. Moor, late Vicar of Clifton-upon-Dunsmore, but living at Rugby at the time of Miss Addison's decease, had on that occasion, the overlooking of the papers at Bilton Hall. He informed me, he found amongst them, several of the original draughts of papers intended for the Spectator with alterations and corrections in Addison's handwriting.

Soon after I had purchased the writing table of the poet, Sir Thomas Lawrence was informed of the fact, and evinced an earnest desire to possess it; I was under deep obligations to him for many acts of kindness conferred by him upon me, and the only way by which I could show my gratitude was by presenting the writing table to him—I should not otherwise have parted with it.

The Portrait of Addison at Holland House was not presented by me. I have in my possession one of Addison, by Zeeman, of ordinary merit as a work of art, but interesting as being, in my belief, an original portrait. I have also two chairs which belonged to Addison; high-backed, with stuffed seats and backs, and covered with yellow morocco, now much faded. Bilton Hall, the country seat of Addison, is but a mile from Rugby where I reside.

Rugby. MATTHEW HOLBECHE BLOXAM.

No. 1038, was a Drawing by Flaxman, not Stothard.

No. 1125, for Rogers, read Milton.

No. 1219, A Spanish Nurse and Child on the Prado, painted by Sir David Wilkie, 1828.

No. 1233, for Sir Thomas More, read Erasmus.

† The work withdrawn was Lord Brougham's Novel of Albert Lunel, 1844, a presentation copy from the Ex-Lord Chancellor to Mr. Rogers. It was rigidly suppressed almost immediately after publication, and Mr. Rogers' manuscript annotations would have rendered it an object of considerable competition.
